RESIDENTIAL RENTAL AGREEMENT — PROPERTY B

Fictional sample agreement | Lakeview Heights, Unit B-703

1. Parties and premises

This fictional sample names Mr. Dev Arjun as the Owner and Ms. Nisha Varma as the Tenant. It is intended for software testing and is not a real contract, legal advice, or a ready-to-sign document.

The sample premises are Unit B-703, Lakeview Heights, Hyderabad, Telangana, described as a three-bedroom apartment. The Owner is assumed to grant residential occupancy to the Tenant under written terms and applicable law.

Before any real agreement, verify each party's identity, authority, property details, and the legal requirements that apply to the transaction.

2. Tenancy term and possession

The illustrative tenancy runs for twelve (12) months, from 1 January 2026 to 31 December 2026. Possession is assumed to begin after agreed payments, handover of keys, and completion of an inventory.

Renewal or extension should be mutually agreed in writing before the end date. At handover, the parties should record the condition of the premises, meter readings, keys, access cards, and items supplied with the apartment.

3. Monthly rent and payment method

The illustrative monthly rent is ■30,000, payable in advance on or before the fifth day of each month. The sample assumes payment by bank transfer or another method acknowledged in writing.

The parties should keep receipts and communicate promptly about any payment issue. No late fee or interest amount is specified in this sample, and none should be inferred.

4. Security deposit and deductions

The illustrative security deposit is ■1,50,000. It is described as refundable subject to lawful, documented deductions for unpaid rent, outstanding agreed charges, or damage beyond ordinary wear and tear.

The deposit should not be treated as the final month's rent unless the parties expressly agree in writing and applicable law permits it. A move-out statement should list each proposed deduction and the evidence supporting it.

Important notice: THIS IS A FICTIONAL TRAINING SAMPLE, NOT LEGAL ADVICE OR A READY-TO-SIGN AGREEMENT. Have a qualified local professional review any real rental agreement.

5. Maintenance and repair responsibilities

The illustrative monthly maintenance charge is ■2,000, shown as Tenant-paid in addition to rent. The parties should confirm the actual association bill and clarify whether any charge changes over time.

The Tenant is expected to maintain reasonable cleanliness, report leaks or faults promptly, and pay for damage caused by negligent or improper use where lawful and supported by the agreement. The Owner is assumed to arrange major structural repairs and essential system repairs not caused by the Tenant, subject to actual terms and law.

Responsibilities for minor plumbing, appliance repair, pest treatment, painting, and replacement of consumables should be clearly documented in a real contract.

6. Utilities and association rules

The Tenant is shown as responsible for electricity consumption and personal internet service. Water, waste collection, common-area services, and other charges should be allocated explicitly after review of the association's current billing rules.

The Tenant should comply with reasonable rules on waste disposal, parking, quiet hours, visitors, shared amenities, and safety. A copy of the rules should be provided before occupancy.

7. Use and alterations

The apartment is for residential use by the Tenant and declared occupants. Material alterations, installation affecting building systems, or subletting require written consent where required by the agreement and law.

Neither party should assume that a private agreement can override applicable statutory protections or building safety rules.

8. Access and maintenance visits

The Owner or a service professional may request access for necessary repairs or inspection with reasonable prior notice and at a mutually suitable time, except for emergencies or situations permitted by law.

Repair requests should be logged with the date, issue description, photographs where useful, and action taken. The parties should respect each other's privacy and keep a record of access where appropriate.

Important notice: THIS IS A FICTIONAL TRAINING SAMPLE, NOT LEGAL ADVICE OR A READY-TO-SIGN AGREEMENT. Have a qualified local professional review any real rental agreement.

9. Notice and ending the tenancy

The sample specifies a notice period of one (1) month for either party, subject to applicable law and the full valid agreement. Any notice should be in writing and identify the planned end date.

Where there is a serious breach, non-payment, or dispute, the parties should follow lawful procedures and obtain appropriate advice. This document does not authorize changing locks, removing belongings, or disconnecting utilities as a way to resolve a dispute.

10. Handover and deposit settlement

At the end of the tenancy, the Tenant should remove personal belongings, return all keys and access cards, provide final utility readings, and leave the premises reasonably clean, allowing for ordinary wear and tear.

The parties should jointly inspect the apartment and compare it with the signed move-in inventory. Any proposed deduction should be itemized and supported by photographs, invoices, or relevant bills. The remaining deposit should be returned under the parties' valid written terms and applicable law.

11. Disputes, changes, and legal review

The parties should try to resolve routine disagreements through documented communication. Any agreed change should be recorded in writing and signed by both parties.

Registration, stamp duty, enforceability, governing law, and jurisdiction requirements depend on the actual facts and applicable rules. Obtain qualified local legal advice before using or adapting a rental agreement.
